Peter Tarasiewicz Hit While Walking Along Central Vermont Tracks Monday-Body Was Carried On Engine For Sixty Feet and Thrown Down Embankment-Man Was On His Way to Work in Thamesville.

Shortly after 6 o'clock Monday morning Peter Tarasuewicz, 45 years of age, was struck and instantly killed by a Central Vermont passenger train near Cold Spring in Thamesville, while walking along the railroad tracks. The man had left his boarding house on High street about 6 o'clock and was on his way to Thamesville where he was employed by the E. J. Cross company of Worcester on the erection of the four-story concrete factory for the Winchester Woolen Mills company. At the spot where the unfortunate man at death there is a curve and this with the heavy fog probably prevented him from seeing the approaching train in time to get out of the way. Apparently he had stepped on one track, supposing the train to be approaching on the other track, and stepped right in its path.
